DUNCAN MARSHALL, Manager.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1908.

An honored tradition declares that the "Father" of the Dominion of Canada is unable to complete a factbook. Commander Perry professes to know a son of the United States who is hampered by no such disability.

September was Edmonton's biggest month this year in building permits. In part this was due to the fact that the city which deflected the season's building during the summer. In part it is due to the splendid weather of the season's crop. The inflated price of lumber is largely responsible for it. Some part of the credit, too, belongs to the magnificent weather we have been having for many weeks, are still having and are likely to have for several weeks to come. The fall months are in some respects the most favorable for building operations. The days are usually warm, but not oppressively hot, and work goes ahead more rapidly than during the sweltering days of midsummer or the uncertainties of the rainy months. The latter half of the present season has been an "unusual" activity in building, and residences and business blocks have been going up in all directions. Most of the "blocks" have been occupied as soon as completed, and there is a large number of vacant houses in the city. Building costs have adapted itself profitably to the growth of population and demand.

Edmonton will get by the point not the poorer government because the city council declined to put up $200 in sub-delegates to the Alberta Union of Municipalities. The price looks high for the benefits that it would likely get in return. It is the city which has belonged to the Union for several years, and the present action is no doubt taken in view of the value received. Edmonton has already met, and solved, in one way or other, most of the problems which other members of the Alberta Union are concerned. Teaching each of them we know either that we have found a solution or that we have not, and in either event we do not need anybody to tell us so. For our information we have paid, and in some cases have paid dearly, to find out to see that a smaller tax could profit from taking note of our experience, and that it could be spending money wisely in finding out what that experience has been. But it is not likely that we could profit much from discussing long the problems with those who have them yet to face.

The suffragettes are a peculiar people. They demonstrate their interest for participation in politics by doing their best to break up political gatherings. They testify their regard for authority by throwing bombs at the ministers of the crown. Some of them take their shower baths in public at the nozzle of a fire hose. Others take their nourishment in private with the assistance of a stomach pump. In all these and a hundred more similar ways they bring distinction of a kind to their sex, and yet they profess to speak for the womanhood of England. If their claims in this respect were true it would be time to lament the decadence of the race in its homeland. Fortunately the more influential members seem to be of a different type. They explain their misgivings, or perhaps the misgivings etc. explain their simplicity. In either event the confidence in a cause is not such could be expected that is desirable. One thing is clear, they are turning the cause of woman suffrage into a farce, rather more amusing and quite as disgusting as Commander Perry's outbreak at his poorly-mannered friend. Realism does nothing to popularize the reform, whether they are male or female, and certainly does nothing to establish the justice of their cause. If the same men and women who favor the extension of

CAPT. SCOTT'S SOUTH POLE EXPEDITION

Will Start From England at the End of Next Month. The Expedition Will Not Take Part-Two Bases are to be Used—Former Attempt.

London, Sept. 29.—The announcement that Captain Robert F. Scott, of the Royal Geographical Society, will start his expedition to the South pole is still fresh in the public mind, will organize and lead another British expedition to the South pole, starting about the beginning of August next, after a year's rest, and in public interest only to the longest and Cook-Pearcy controversy. Captain Scott's expedition will, it is understood, and include Lieutenant Shackleton, who is receiving the support of the Royal Geographical Society, of which he is a fellow.

The forthcoming expedition will have two bases, according to the tentative scheme already arranged. One base will be in MacMurdo Sound and the other in King Edward VII. Land, that point be reached. The expedition will endeavor not only to reach the South pole, but also to ascend a valuable geographical work in King Edward VII. Land, which is now quite an unexplored region.

On his previous expedition Captain Scott used a very strong vessel, the Discovery, specially built for his purpose, weighing 175 tons. Her dimensions were: Length 125 feet, beam 34 feet, depth 20 feet, displacement 170 tons, and she was equipped with a powerful engine of 450 horse power, and had a capacity of 240 tons. The Discovery carried out three sledging parties, and was carefully provisioned for three years. The outfit, however, was not intended to reach the winter station and the supply of scientific instruments and stores could not be carried.

It is understood that Captain Scott's expedition will be a more complete one than the last. The crew will consist of six men, including the two previous members of the expedition, and a new member, Mr. Ernest Shackleton, who was with the expedition on the last voyage. The expedition will be made in the forthcoming expedition, and there is every reason to believe that Captain Scott will on this occasion pass Lieutenant Shackleton's "latitude."

Though perhaps quite as important from the geographical point of view as the North pole, the Antarctic region has been comparatively neglected. Whilst the northern portion of this planet has been practically covered by explorers and expeditions during the past 200 years, the South pole is still terra incognita, or almost so. So far as is known, the Southern Ocean was first discovered by James Cook in 1771, and it was not until 1820 that the existence of a circum-polar sea was conclusively proved. The great mass of land there, the most inaccessible of the world, has been the subject of the most adventurous expeditions, and that the strongest evidence of the presence of a continent, which is supposed to be about 110 degrees N. latitude, and 11 degrees S. latitude.

More definite knowledge, however, was added from human knowledge to the Antarctic "chance" zone when the first expedition, the Norwegian expedition, led an expedition in 1895, and another in 1898. The latter was equipped by Sir George Neave, and set out with a ship that had ever been rescued, and it took the magnetic position of the South pole as about latitude 73 degrees, 20 minutes S., and 11° E. A Belgian expedition, led by Dr. Adrien de Gerlache, set out in 1897, and returned, with good results, in 1899.

On July 21, 1901, Captain Scott, as referred to above, sailed from the Thames in the Discovery, carrying out an enterprise which had been inflated ten years before, and had occupied two years in preparation. The Discovery returned to Portsmouth in September, 1904, after a two years' sojourn in Antarctic waters. The magnificent results of Captain Scott's expedition are set forth in his work, "The Voyage of the Discovery."

The latest Antarctic expedition, in "Nimrod," commanded by Lieut. Shackleton, sailed from Torquay on August 7, 1907, for New Zealand. From this point the expedition proceeded to the base in King Edward VII. Land, where the exploring party commenced its march on the program which had been carefully arranged, and led to a most successful result. It was the first time that a party of men had reached the South pole, and the expedition was the only one in the world that had been successful in reaching the South pole.

Mr. Charles Ross reached as far as 75 degrees, 11 minutes; Mr. Borchgrevink got about 50 miles further in; and Captain Scott added 200 miles to that record, and Lieutenant Shackleton passed it with an extra 100. There is every probability that Captain Scott's will not be the only expedition in the world that has been successful in reaching the South pole. It is on the way from Cape Horn at present, and Mr. Borchgrevink will lead another expedition this year.

TO SUPERCEDE MCGILL RUSH Push Ball Contest to Take Place of Hill-Rolling.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—It is highly probable that the hill-rolling contest, which has been the staple of the McGill Rush, will be replaced by a push ball contest, which will be introduced to college life by the McGill Athletic Union.

Last year Dr. Barnes unfolded to the Science men the mysteries of the McGill Rush, and that method was declared to be an improvement over the old system of laboratory climbing up the hill. The new method, which was introduced to college life by the McGill Athletic Union, was a great success.

It is whispered along the campus walks that the worthy professor of physics has imported a large ball, which the newcomers may pit their strength and skill against the second year men with the sphere as the medium.

If the push ball game proves superior to the science men, it is probable that the McGill Athletic Union will adopt this method. Furthermore, it is thought that the McGill Athletic Union will have a great success in the new method. The McGill Athletic Union has been quite successful in recent years. The McGill Athletic Union has been quite successful in recent years.

CHARGE IS ATTEMPT TO KILL Suburb Man Charged of Attempting to Murder Ex-Mayor.

Suburb, Ont., Sept. 29.—The trial of John B. Lennex, ex-Mayor of Suburb, for attempting to murder the late Mayor of Suburb, is now in progress. The charge is that Lennex attempted to kill the late Mayor of Suburb, who was a prominent citizen of the town.

On the morning of July 3, 1908, between two and three o'clock, a portion of Mr. Lennex's residence was visited by the late Mayor of Suburb, who was a prominent citizen of the town. The late Mayor of Suburb was a prominent citizen of the town.

TO FOSTER GAELIC TONGUE Gleaners to Perpetuate Customs of Scottish People.

Cambridge, Sept. 29.—A year ago the population of the county of Cambridge, which is a Gaelic speaking people, was about 110,000. The Gaelic language is a very ancient language, and it is the language of the Scottish people.

With such a marked change in the population of the county of Cambridge, which is a Gaelic speaking people, was about 110,000. The Gaelic language is a very ancient language, and it is the language of the Scottish people.

A meeting with this object in view was held last night at the town hall, when Dr. D. D. Macdonald, John P. McGee, and A. McDonald, and John Kennedy were appointed a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws to be submitted to a meeting to be held on October 15.
